'Heather never expected or wanted the life of an old lady.' Blade changed that. But he left. Now Heather has to put on a brave face and move on. Her top priority is the safety of her newborn son. To find that safety she only has one option. The Cornish Crusaders. It didn't take long for Heather to realise the Crusaders were a different breed of bikers. She was expecting history to repeat itself, but after a warm welcome there were no expectations of her, no disrespect and certainly no humiliation. They liked to party and lose themselves in women but when the time comes to defend and protect their club, their girls, their families, the drinks go down and the guns come out. Just as Heather starts to live her life again old faces bring new danger and new enemies. With all the secrets, lies and half-truths will Heather ever get to live happily ever after? This book is intended for people over the age of 18, due to adult material
