Excerpt from In the Kitchen

Some of these receipts are French, some German, many are from English books, and many from excellent American collections. No small number are taken from written receipt-books of families famous both at the North and South for their savory cooking. Others are the result of weighing and measuring the ingredients of delightful dishes which celebrated cooks have, for the last fifty years, prepared "according to judgment." Most of these receipts have been tested by myself, and there is not one in which I have not full confidence.
